March is the time of year when spring arrives, St. Patrick’s Day is celebrated, and the intensity of March Madness basketball brackets occurs. March is also when we recognize Brain Injury Awareness Month.

Every 23 seconds, one person in the U.S. sustains a brain injury. 1 The Brain Injury Association of America leads the nation in observing Brain Injury Awareness Month, to help educate the public about the incidence of brain injury, the needs of people with brain injuries and their families, empower those who have survived, and promote the many types of support that are available.2

Take this opportunity to further your skills in this clinical area by visiting me.aapmr.org for our collection of brain injury resources, developed by your peers.

Brain Injury Fast Facts:

- Falls are the leading cause of traumatic brain injury (TBI). 3
- At least 5.3 million Americans currently have a long-term or lifelong need for help to perform activities of daily living as a result of a TBI. 3
- Direct medical costs and indirect costs such as lost productivity due to TBI totaled an estimated $60 billion in the United States in 2000.3

Every day, physiatrists help their patients define functional outcomes and maximize quality of life. In many cases, function isn't defined by progress but maintenance; not all conditions are reversible. The human body is imperfect but the human spirit is strong. And thankfully, physiatry is more than…well, you fill in the blank.

If you've ever visited the AAPM&R National Office in Rosemont, Illinois, you may have noticed vibrant pieces of art featuring a brain and spine hanging in the reception area. We'd like to introduce Elizabeth Jameson to you. Ms. Jameson graduated from Stanford University with a BA in 1973, and received a law degree from Boalt Hall School of Law in 1976. After a 30-year career as a lawyer representing poor and vulnerable children with chronic illnesses and disabilities, her professional and personal life changed dramatically when she was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis (MS).
